Description
we need to create a catalog of stylesheets for morpho so that when the user exports a package, the html file can be rendered correctly for each doctype. right now, a generic stylesheet is always used for every doctype. This works but it is kind of ugly.

When this is implemented, consider using the format that metacat uses for storing stylesheet catalog information. Then you could borrow the code from metacat to implement the catalog.

Isn't this already working?
