Description

This might be a question, rather than a bug.

This document was added to metacat v1.9.0 (at lter): sbc_eml210_test.1.1

It is a citation doc with no access tree. It was put in (and I assume owned by) either user=sbc or user=mobrien. Sorry, I can't tell you which user uploaded it.

I logged in as the user who is also the owner and tried to view the document (I tried this as both sbc and mobrien). I get the message that "user public does not have permission to view this doc"

Is this behavior planned? I know that the lack of an <access> tree means that the doc is not publicly accessible, but it seems like metacat should let the owner view the document after logging in.

Since the doc is small, I am including it here:

uid=sbc,o=LTER,dc=ecoinformatics,dc=org is the owner and should have ALL permission on this object. As the metacat admin, I can login and see the document on the KNB so we know it's there, at least.
