Description

If you click on the Sources button and change settings beneath Components or Data, these changes are gone after you quit and relaunch Kepler.

History

I can't reproduce this. It may have been that the library was not building correctly before and the values weren't getting save. Now the library is building correctly and the values are persisting fine for me here.

oh no you're right the data source values are not persisting, the component preference values seem ok though.

ok, I updated the EcoGridServicesController to persist the values without writing to the config file. Looks like this also fixes bug 4330
