WRM has been moved to the Report Designer view, which now contains the report designer and the instance viewer in different tabs. You can cycle between the different report designs and reports by moving rows in the WRM. Leaving open for feedback. Is this sufficient, or does it need to also be in the workflow view?

I'm really liking this the more I interact with it.

I even like how you can "open" a row in a new window if you do want to see the workflow as it existed in the past - keeps it siloed a bit.
