Description

How do I view the licenses of the pieces of software that are shipped with Kepler?

I did an analysis for Ptolemy, see below:

There was a somewhat spammy Slashdot article about Open Source licensing at <http://mobile.slashdot.org/story/11/03/08/2041257/Android-Devices-Are-Hives-of-License-Violations> that says that phone apps are not following Open Source licenses.

The original article at <http://www.linuxplanet.com/linuxplanet/newss/7315/1/> talks about OpenLogic's license tool, which I downloaded and ran on the Ptolemy II 8.0.1 release.

The executive summary is that we did ok, though I missed a few licenses. What I did was run the tool and then compare what the tool found with what is in the copyright.htm file, which can be found at <http://ptolemy.eecs.berkeley.edu/ptolemyII/ptII8.0/ptII8.0.1/copyright.htm>

My comments are below.

bash-3.2$ ./discovery --path /Applications/Ptolemy/ptII8.0.1

I asked Hauke about these. We probably need to include specific language for the eclipse files.

copyright.htm does not mention java_cup. The java_cup.jar file is used by Caltrop. I fixed a transposition typo in ptolemy.actor.gui.GenerateCopyrights that failed to identify the dependency.

copyright.htm does not mention jdom.jar. I updated GenerateCopyrights so that if ptolemy.domains.ptinyos.util.nc2moml.MoMLLib is present, then we include a link to the jdom license file.

copyright.htm does not mention saxon.jar. This was caused by the same typo in GenerateCopyrights.

x10            unknown  vendors/misc/x10/tjx10p-13/lib/x10.jar

This is probably the worst of the lot, as this file is GPL'd. I'm not sure how it happened. The about:copyright feature lists it. I intended to remove the X10 functionality from the release, but did not do so.

OpenLogic's tool missed these open source tools:

- AElfred License
- Rtxt License (might not be included in the release)
- Colt License
- JNI Launcher (obscure)
- PDFRenderer
- Soot License (kind of obscure)
- Copyright for mapss jar file used by PSDF (BSD license held by UMD).

Below is a run of the OpenLogic tool on the Mac OS Kepler 2.2rc3 installation.
How do I view the licenses for these packages?

The Kepler Copyright says that Kepler is BSD licensed, but does not cover all if these other packages. Some of the packages are covered by the Ptolemy copyright system, but what about ant?

To show only file names of discovered files, run discovery with --no-paths
To show full paths to discovered files, run discovery with --show-base-dirs
To show OLEX web site links for discovered packages, run discovery with --olex-links

NOTE: OSSDiscovery with the OLEX plugin uses the fast rules by default. To do a slower, but more accurate search, run discovery with --rule-types=all

In Kepler, each module has a licenses.txt file that should document the licenses in any third-party jars.

#2 - 03/09/2011 08:28 AM - Christopher Brooks

Good that the license.txt files are there, is there anyway to view them from within Kepler?
When I click on Help | Module Documentation, no modules are listed.
Perhaps the licenses.txt files could be visible here.

At a minimum, Help | Kepler Documentation | "license" should be updated to mention the license.txt files.

It would be good to review the files listed below and be sure that licenses.txt includes the licenses. I missed a few for Ptolemy.
