Description
I've already gone through a few rounds of testing on Mac 10.8 and Win7. During the last round Jianwu, Dan, and Jing did some testing on linux. Today I cut a new sensor-view-0.9.0 to fix workflow issues. In this current round I've done the usual sensor-view testing, and run all sensor-view and demo workflows successfully except: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Matlab workflows (Matlab's giving me license errors under 10.8: http://www.mathworks.com/support/solutions/en/data/1-17RCK/index.html?s_cid=pl_LME9_r2012a)</li><li>• the web service and REST demos, which use a webservice that is 'temporarily' down.</li><li>• those in the 'unsupported' dir.</li></ul> I'm going to test on Win7 and Ubuntu 10.04, and hope to release as is soon. The last thing I think that needs doing is, if we don't want people working off trunk for these webapps, for Jing to tag a 'release' of the workflow runengine and scheduler, and update any docs to refer to those tags.

Also need to create a webpage for the Kepler Sensor Platform that the release announcement can refer to, with more info, screenshot(s), and link to doc.

#2 - 08/30/2012 05:34 PM - Derik Barseghian

Moving to 1.x.y target.

I made a KSP page:

Going to release patches and sensor view shortly -- Final fairly thorough round of testing tonight after new changes went into sensor-view-0.9 went well on Mac 10.8 and Win7. All the usual testing, demo workflows, archival workflow, scheduling a workflow, WRM and run export, remote run download, etc.

#4 - 08/30/2012 09:37 PM - Derik Barseghian

Released. Closing.
